Newport's Summer Population Going Home—Opening of School, Hop Picking and the Threatened Railroad Strike is Cause—Many Yet Remain

(By LaMar Tooze) Newport, Oregon, Aug. 30.—(Special to the Capital Journal)—The story at Newport now is more one of departure than of arrivals. The starting of the public schools, the commencing of the hop picking season and a threatened railroad strike, have stimulated beach sojourners to conclude their vacations here. In spite of these, however, a goodly crowd still remains. September comes tomorrow and it will see the largest beach population of any September in recent years. In many respects this season has been a remarkable one. This section of the Oregon coast line has never had better weather than during the last month and a half. The fishing has been good and various attractions like the chalet and Indian fair have been most pleasant diversions. The coming of the coastwise railroad will not detract from Newport's attractiveness as a summer resort. Four hours from Portland will mean more week end excursionists and a larger number of permanent residents from Portland and Eastern Oregon points. The road will open a country unexcelled for natural beauty.

Judge P. H. D'Arcy, Miss Teresa D'Arcy and Miss Georgia Rouse of Salem arrived in Newport Saturday and remained over Sunday. J. E. Fruitland News

Comparison of Prices Show the Farmers Condition Greatly Improved

It didn't cost so much to live 20 years ago, nor did the farmers receive so much for their products. A copy of the Capital Journal of September 19, 1896, was recently brought to the office. The farmer who talks of hard times may draw some consolation from a comparison of the prices now and 20 years ago. Then wheat was quoted at 41 cents a bushel, against the today's quotation of $1.05; heavy hogs were selling for $3, while today they are worth $9 a hundred. Twenty years ago wool was selling for freight to nine cents a pound and the best offered for eggs was 10 cents a dozen, less than one-half of the present quotations. Hens were worth five cents a pound and hops from two to four cents. Timothy hay was a drug on the market at $8.50, while the quotation today is from $15 to $16 a ton. The best dairy butter brought 12 1-2 cents a pound while today 34 cents is the quotation. Even spring chicken was quoted at five cents a pound wholesale and now the price is 15 cents. Willis Bros. the dry goods merchants on Court and Liberty streets advertise the best of value at five cents a yard. On the front page of the paper, E. T. Barnes, proprietor of the New York Racket, advertises that he will sell all kinds of dry goods at close prices. G. W. Johnson & Son announce in a large display ad that they conducted a first class clothing house, State and Liberty streets. The Willamette hotel, A. L. Wagner, manager, announces that electric cars leave the hotel for all public buildings and points of interest. Ed S. Lampert announces in an advertisement that he has bought the harness stock of Frank E. Shaffer and M. Beamer and that the $4,000 worth of stock would be sold for 50 cents on the dollar. Col. J. Olmstead was the proprietor of the Salem Steam Laundry 20 years ago and his advertisement calls attention to the cut in prices in which plain shirts will be laundered for 10 cents, socks three cents a pair and handkerchiefs for one cent. T. K. Ford was loaning money, with an office over the Bush bank. Some Personal Notes. The only firms that advertised 25 years ago and who are now in business are the Barnes store and the Geo. W. Johnson & Son clothing store. Among the personal mentions are the following: Banker A. Bush was among the Salemites who had business in Portland today. Mrs. G. C. Litchfield came up from Portland this morning. Mrs. Jane Richards, who has been visiting her brother, Hon. Jno. Minto, and other relatives for several months, left this morning for her home in Tipton, Iowa. She was accompanied to Portland by A. T. Wain. Mr. and Mrs. Werner Breyman returned home from a five months' sojourn in Europe. An informal reception was given last evening by relatives and friends. Councilman W. T. Rigdon will deliver an address at the Riekey school house tonight. He will address the citizens of Silverton Saturday. Electrical railways of the United States represent a valuation of $730,000,000. Judge E. A. Chase, age 62, has enlisted in the Tenth infantry, in Albany, N. Y.
